Course content

The course consists of an individual assignment in the subject Swedish and teaching methodology of clear relevance to the future profession as a teacher, and defence of the independent work and critical review of another independent project. The aim of the course is to provide students with specialised understanding of the didactic issues and professionally related problems that are specific to the subject of Swedish, and a specialised ability to execute a research study, the implementation and results of which shall provide the student with an understanding of the professional tradition of the subject and its theoretical and methodological aspects.

In connection with the degree project, the student is to seek, identify and select relevant literature, when necessary in consultation with the supervisor.

Course design

The course consists of the student's independent execution of a degree project with the support of a supervisor. During the course, the independent project will be discussed at individual supervision sessions and supervision seminars, and finally discussed at a public seminar. Throughout the course, the student will be expected to participate actively in the supervision activities and the seminars organised.

Assessment

The assessment is based on the student's composition, presentation and defence of an independent project at an open seminar and the student's critical review of another independent project. At the seminar, the independent project and the critical review are assessed by a specially appointed examiner.

The examiner, in consultation with Disability Support Services, may deviate from the regular form of examination in order to provide a permanently disabled student with a form of examination equivalent to that of a student without a disability.

Subcourses that are part of this course can be found in an appendix at the end of this document.
