corporate financing decisions, and to use theories, concepts, and their independent judgment to evaluate these issues;
- demonstrate ability to use event study techniques to evaluate the impact of corporate financing related events on firm outcomes.

Course content
The main objective is to provide students with a rigorous and applied knowledge of corporate financing. The course consists of three modules. The first module deals with venture capital and private equity financing, and extends to raising funds from public markets through initial and seasoned public equity offerings. The second module looks at corporate governance issues that arise in the context of financing. The last module focuses on event study methodology, applied to topics from the first and second modules.

The course focuses on applied financial analysis. Through cases and assignments, the course gives students the opportunity to analyze complex and unstructured practical financing situations and problems. The idea is to put theory to work in complex situations, thereby gaining a deeper understanding of corporate financing tactics and strategies. The course offers a rich learning experience, by exposing students to a number of real-life situations and giving insight into a variety of financial decision-making problems.

Course design
The course is conducted in the form of lectures and case and assignment work. The course emphasizes applied learning, where participants learn to use the studied concepts, models, and analysis techniques. To facilitate this, assignment work makes up an important part of the teaching and learning activities on the course. Lectures will cover parts of the course literature, with particular emphasis on the more challenging parts. This means that self-study of the course literature is essential and that the assigned readings are integral parts of the teaching and learning activities.

Assessment

See appendix including examination sessions. (Will be attached to the curriculum automatically in the system).

Assessment and grading are based on assignment and casework. Since the course emphasizes applied learning, the examination is focused on participants employing the studied concepts, models, and analysis techniques.
