Learning outcomes
On a general level the student shall acquire advanced knowledge of the economic and social consequences of demographic processes. Specifically students will be able to:

Knowledge and understanding
• individually discuss, in writing, various aspects of population aging, as it impacts both developed and developing countries
• explain the effects of population aging on various forms of pension systems

This is a translation of the course syllabus approved in Swedish
Competence and skills
• analyse and discuss how varying cohort sizes may affect individual welfare
• analyse and discuss the impacts of migration on the demographic and economic structure of both receiving and sending countries

Judgement and approach
• reflect upon and demonstrate an understanding of how demographic changes over the past century have led to an evolution of family roles

Course content
The course examines the impact of demographic change on the social and economic fabric of society, with a focus on issues of importance to today's policymakers. The impact of population aging will be examined in detail, as will the possible benefits / pitfalls of migration as a potential solution to population aging. The course will also examine the impacts of demographic change on individuals, through a discussion of the effects of cohort size on economic outcomes. The changing prospects for women in today's economy will also be analyzed within the framework of changing family structures. Governmental transfers dependent upon age structure, such as pension systems, will be studied, as will other aspects of intergenerational transfers.

Course design
The course is designed as a series of lectures and seminars.

Assessment
Grading is based on individual performance, via written assignments, oral presentation as well as group activities. Examination may draw on teaching as well as the course literature.

The University views plagiarism very seriously, and will take disciplinary actions against students for any kind of attempted malpractice in examinations and assessments. Plagiarism is considered to be a very serious academic offence. The penalty that may be imposed for this, and other unfair practice in examinations or assessments, includes suspension from the University.
