Course content

The main objective of the course is to provide the student with basic knowledge on the nature and scope of Global Marketing. This course provides an in-depth study of the nature and determinants of the behavior of organizations in relation to their marketing activities in a global environment. The purpose of this course is to provide a comprehensive understanding of the cultural, social, legal, political, and strategic dimensions of the global marketplace. Using the "strategy tripod" --analyzing strategy from the industry-, institution-and resource-based views— students will also explore what determines the success or failure of firms around the globe. The discussions will focus on subject areas such as attitudes, perceptions, preferences, and buyer/seller behavior in a global marketplace. In addition, this course investigates various promotional tools used in the communication mix, such as advertising, sales promotion, and publicity, to sell products and services. Concepts include: advertising planning processes, determining advertising and promotional goals and objectives, control and evaluation of advertising and promotional programs, and regulatory issues.

Course design

The teaching consists of lectures, guest lectures and seminars. Lectures present and discuss central issues. At guest lectures researchers and managers present specific cases. During seminars, each group presents its case study and they will be asked a series of questions about that case study. Examination is based on group assignments (papers written and presented) and a final take home exam or written exam.

Assessment

Examination is based on group assignments (papers written and presented) and a final take home exam or written exam.

The examiner, in consultation with Disability Support Services, may deviate from the regular form of examination in order to provide a permanently disabled student with a form of examination equivalent to that of a student without a disability.

Subcourses that are part of this course can be found in an appendix at the end of this document.
