- perform a critical reading and review of the text of a fellow student

Judgement and approach

- judge how issues of gender, power and ethnicity are reflected and highlighted in the required reading and popular culture

Course content

The course deals with Judaism primarily as a religious tradition, introducing students to key Jewish terminology, basic religious ideas and Jewish ceremonies, rites, traditions, practices and faith.

Against this background, the course discusses and exemplifies how present-day lived Judaism is manifested in both religious and more secular contexts, illustrated by a selection of fictional and visual representations of Jewish faith and practice, which is to enable students partly to nuance and broaden their understanding of how Judaism as a lived religion is expressed and interpreted, and partly to discuss and assess popular culture representations of Jewish faith and practices and how these can have an impact on the image of Judaism in non-Jewish communities.

Course design

The course mainly takes place as independent study, complemented with screencasts, seminars and peer review. Participation in peer review is compulsory. To be able to follow the teaching, students must have access to a computer and internet connection.

Assessment

The assessment is continuous and based on six online exercises and two written application assignments amounting to approximately 1800-2000 words each.

Subcourses that are part of this course can be found in an appendix at the end of this document.

Grades

Marking scale: Fail, Pass, Pass with distinction.
