Course content

Learning, development and change are important aspects of managerial practice. This course provides a broad overview of some key aspects of management/managing both on an academic and explicit level and on a pragmatic and tacit level. The contents of the course is divided into the following parts:

1. Theories and praxis of learning, development and change in organisations. An organisations ability to develop and change is essential. Hence change management is an important part of managing. The course will give an overview of theories and models on organisational change and change management.
2. The theories and praxis of managing development, learning and change in individuals. An important part of Management is to develop individuals in line with organisational needs. The course will give an overview of theories and models regarding how adults learn and develop.
3. The theories and praxis of managing ones on development, learning and change as a manager. Successful management is based both on tacit and explicit competence. It is also personal and situational. The course will provide tools for continues personal learning and development as a Manager.
4. The theoretical and pragmatic aspects of management careers. Managers operate on a "management market" and therefor need to understand how these markets work. Building a personal brand and building a career plan is important. The course will present models and tools for personal branding and models for various types of careers.

Course design

The course consists partly of lectures, discussions and student presentations and partly of various workshops and student projects. The structure of the course is further communicated in Course Instructions (distributed separately). The course runs over two semesters and parallel with other courses in the program. The fall semester (part A) is 3 credits and the spring semester (part B) is 3 credits.

Assessment

Assessment and grading are based on two parts:

1. One or more group assignments presented and discussed in class focusing on the ability to apply, present and discuss the content of the course.
2. An individual written report from their shadowing of a designated manager-in-work.
3. A continues, individual written learning journal where students document, analyse and reflect on their individual learning and development in the program.
4. Participation in tutorials focusing on student's learning and development in the program.

A student who does not pass the assignment(s) (1) will be given an extra assignment. A student who does not pass the individual written report (2) will be given an extra assignment. A student who does not pass the individual written learning journal (3) will be given an extra assignment. A student who does not pass the tutorials (4) will be given an extra assignment.
