Knowledge and understanding

- in an independent project demonstrate both broad knowledge of the field of religious studies and specialised knowledge of specific issues in ethics

- critically summarise and discuss current research debates within ethics

Competence and skills

- independently select and apply methods of relevance to ethics
- identify and formulate research issues and integrate knowledge in ethics in independent arguments
- independently delimit, plan and carry out a research assignment within ethics
- in speech and writing and in dialogue with others, report and discuss problems and solutions in ethics
- independently write a research paper in ethics featuring the established apparatus and an academic style
- defend and review an academic paper and constructively participate in advanced discussions within ethics

Judgement and approach

- assess their own and others' findings within ethics with regard to relevant, disciplinary and societal aspects
- assess the possibilities and limitations of research
- in speech and writing identify their need of further knowledge in the field of religious studies

Course content

In the course, students gain practice in writing an independent research paper and critically reviewing their own and others' research projects. Focus is placed on the independent production of a research paper.

In consultation with the supervisor, the student defines a topic and identifies relevant issues and previous research of importance. This process is to be based on the knowledge and skills acquired by the student on previous courses. In parallel with independent studies, the student is to participate in research seminars or advanced studies seminars, if such are offered.

The writing of the paper generally starts with an inventory of issues and previous research, and is based on a short account written by the student of the issues, methods, hypotheses and outline of the paper. Throughout the work on the project, the student and supervisor discuss individual sections with the aim of gradually shaping the paper as a whole.

The finished paper is to be presented and defended at the research seminar or advanced studies seminar. In this context, the student is to orally present the main content and argument of the paper and respond to critical questions from the appointed reviewer (see below) and other seminar participants.

The student is also to critically review the project of a fellow student in accordance with specific instructions. The emphasis is placed on the student's ability to discuss the contents and key arguments of the paper, but also the apparatus to some extent.

Course design

The teaching consists of participation in seminars and individual supervision.

Assessment

The assessment is based on the students' presentation and defence of their paper and critical review of a fellow student's paper at a research seminar or advanced studies seminar.

In order for a paper to be presented, it must be designed in accordance with the supervisor's instructions and, unless an exemption has been granted by the examiner, not exceed 145 000 characters including spaces. An examiner who finds that a paper to be presented will be failed can decide that the assessment is to be postponed.

The grade is to be based on the paper, the student's presentation at the seminar and critical review of a fellow student's paper. Following the defence seminar, the examiner makes a preliminary assessment of how well the learning outcomes have been met. The student will then be given a week to edit the paper, whereupon the examiner will determine the grade.

Passed degree projects at the Faculties of Humanities and Theology can be registered in the LUP Student Papers database if the student so wishes. The student is responsible for uploading the passed degree project as a PDF file in LUP student papers.
