Kursens innehåll

The aim of the course is to give a general understanding of Swedish political life, and to introduce students to political science research on various aspects of Swedish politics. The course covers the main features of vital political institutions, such as the constitution and the electoral system. This is accompanied by a discussion of political actors, such as parties, interest groups, and the relations between the state and society. In addition, the course addresses the orientation of public policy in certain areas, such as the construction of the welfare state, foreign policy and security policy.

Kursens genomförande

The course commences with a series of lectures and seminars that introduce and analyse the main features of Swedish political life. In addition to attending lectures, students are expected to take an active part in seminar discussions. Examination on this part of the course is in the form of a take-home exam.

During the latter part of the course, the students write papers in which they analyse a specific theme covered on the course. The topic is selected together with the examiner. The course papers should reflect a research process in which the students are expected to collect and process additional empirical and theoretical material. The course papers are examined at a seminar in which the students discuss one another's papers.

In addition to the regular examinations two extra examinations will be organised each term.
