Course content

The course consists of two modules:

1. Religion, Tradition and Communication, 15 credits
2. Thesis, 15 credits

Module 1, Religion, Tradition and Communication, aims to develop the students' expertise in religious education by critically reviewing and analysing different phenomena in the field. It provides discussions and perspectives on the mediation of religious and cultural traditions in schools, religious communities and media through different models of religious education and theories of socialisation, collective memory and communication.

Module 2, Thesis, consists of the students' composition of a Bachelor's degree project worth 15 credits. The student chooses a specialisation for their degree project in consultation with the course director and supervisor. The seminars mainly deal with methodological issues, drafts of papers and completed papers.

Course design

In module 1, the teaching consists of lectures and three presentation seminars.

In module 2, the teaching consists of approximately 10 seminars, about 5 of which are compulsory, and individual supervision. Absence from compulsory seminars must be compensated for with a written assignment, in accordance with the lecturer's instructions.

Assessment

Module 1 is assessed through three written assignments which are discussed and presented orally at three separate seminars, as well as a final written take-home exam.

Module 2 is assessed partly through a degree project conducted by the student and presented at a seminar, and partly through the student's critical review of a fellow student's degree project.

The examiner, in consultation with Disability Support Services, may deviate from the regular form of examination in order to provide a permanently disabled student with a form of examination equivalent to that of a student without a disability.
