Course content

The course provides an introduction to the history of Skåne in a long-term perspective. It encompasses an extensive period of time, from the ice age, when the territory later to be designated as Skåne was first settled by people, to the present. During these close to 15 000 years people left innumerable material traces and these traces form the subject matter of this course. Through the study of material remains we acquire knowledge of the changes of the living conditions, social structures and contact patterns of people. The course illustrates this development through examples of the department's research about the cultural history of Skåne.

Course design

The course consists of lectures, field trips and study visits at museums. All components except lectures, i.e. field trips and study visits (1-3), are compulsory.

Assessment

The assessment is based on a final written assignment. Subject to an agreement with the students, other forms of examination may occur.

The examiner, in consultation with Disability Support Services, may deviate from the regular form of examination in order to provide a permanently disabled student with a form of examination equivalent to that of a student without a disability.

Subcourses that are part of this course can be found in an appendix at the end of this document.
