Learning outcomes

On completion of the course, the students shall be able to

Knowledge and understanding

- describe, in broad terms, the contents, history and main theological features of the Old Testament texts
- identify key theological terms and patterns of thought in the Old Testament texts chosen for the course, and account for their use in history and in the present

- account for basic challenges to the exegesis of texts formulated in another language and in another socio-historical context

Competence and skills

- use a dictionary and grammar to read Old Testament prose and simple poetry in the original Hebrew and translate the texts into Swedish in both speech and writing
- use the central vocabulary of biblical Hebrew
- use the critical apparatus when working on Old Testament texts
- independently perform an exegetically informed interpretation of an Old Testament text in the original language

Judgement and approach

- reflect in speech and writing on the impact of translation on interpretation
- assess and query the conditions of their own and others' interpretations of Old Testament texts

Course content

The course focuses on Old Testament texts and their theologies. It mainly consists of translation exercises based on previously acquired knowledge of the morphology, syntax and basic vocabulary of biblical Hebrew. Students read Hebrew texts from the Old Testament, mainly prose from the Pentateuch but also poetry from Isaiah and Psalms. The translation exercises are complemented with study and discussion of exegetical issues, key tenets of faith of the Old Testament and basic hermeneutic perspectives. The course is completed with a written exegesis of an Old Testament text.

Course design

The teaching consists of translation exercises, lectures and approximately three compulsory seminars.

Assessment

The assessment is based on two invigilated written exams, one midway through and one at the end of the course, and on a written exegesis assignment including peer review.

Subcourses that are part of this course can be found in an appendix at the end of this document.

Grades

Marking scale: Fail, Pass, Pass with distinction.
