Course content

The course provides basic knowledge of the Chinese political system and political developments after 1978. It analyses a number of key issues and challenges that characterise contemporary Chinese society. This applies to: e.g. environmental issues, socio-economic development, and issues related to regional differences and gaps in society. The course also focuses on developments in civil society and the human rights situation. Freedom of expression, the role of the media and digital developments, as well as the emergence of a surveillance society, are also studied in the course. Domestic issues are viewed from a global perspective. The course discusses and analyses China's global ambitions and foreign and security policy.

Course design

The teaching consists of lectures, discussions, film screenings, and one to three seminars with oral presentations.

Unless there are valid reasons to the contrary, compulsory participation is required in seminars.

Absence from a compulsory seminar can be compensated for by an assignment in accordance with instructions from the course director.

Assessment

The assessment is based on two seminar papers (each paper 2 credits) and a written home exam (3.5 credits).

The course includes opportunities for assessment at a first examination, a re-sit close to the first examination and a second re-sit for courses that have ended during that school year.

The examiner, in consultation with Disability Support Services, may deviate from the regular form of examination in order to provide a permanently disabled student with a form of examination equivalent to that of a student without a disability.

Subcourses that are part of this course can be found in an appendix at the end of this document.

Grades

Marking scale: Fail, Pass, Pass with distinction.

The grade for a non-passing result is Fail. For the grade of Pass on the entire course, the student must have been awarded at least a Pass on all assessed components. For the grade Pass with Distinction the student must have been awarded Pass with Distinction on more than 50 percent of the components.

At the start of the course, students are informed about the learning outcomes stated in the syllabus and about the grading scale and how it is applied in the course.

Entry requirements

General entry requirements and at least 30 higher education credits.

Oral and written language proficiency in English equivalent to English 6 from Swedish upper secondary school is a requirement.

A general exemption from the requirement of proficiency in Swedish is applied.
