

Joint Faculties of Humanities and Theology

COSM41, Asian Studies: Methodology in Practice (Online), 7.5 credits

Asienstudier: Metodologi i praktik (online), 7,5 högskolepoäng
Second Cycle / Avancerad nivå

Details of approval

The syllabus was approved by The Pro Dean of First and Second Cycle Studies at The Joint Faculties of Humanities and Theology on 2024-03-14 (U 2024/164). The syllabus comes into effect 2024-03-14 and is valid from the autumn semester 2024.

General information

The course is mandatory for students abroad on exchange studies in the third semester of the Masters of Science Programme in Asian Studies. It is also offered as a freestanding course.

Language of instruction: English

Main field of study Specialisation

Asian Studies A1N, Second cycle, has only first-cycle course/s as entry requirements

Learning outcomes

On completion of the course, the student shall:

Knowledge and understanding

- be able to give an account of and critically assess the methodological perspectives and approaches presented in the course as well as the assumptions on which these are based verbally and in writing.

Competence and skills

- be able to apply reflexive methodology to their own and others' research.

- be able to present and defend a complete research plan in writing for a qualified examination.

Judgement and approach

- be able to review the work of others and be able to give constructive comments orally and in writing.
- be able to account for and critically assess the consequences for research that certain methodological perspectives with associated methods and techniques entail.

Course content

The course deals with methodological issues linked to the structure, design, and writing of a thesis for a master's degree in Asian Studies. The course covers different methodological approaches within the social sciences as well as specific research methods and related techniques.

From an organisational and methodological perspective, the purpose of the course is to develop skills in designing, planning, implementing, writing, and evaluating research on Asia. The course covers central methods for qualitative and quantitative research with associated techniques and during the course the student develops skills to effectively deal with and report data, findings, and conclusions.

Course design

The course consists of lectures and two to three online seminars.

Participation in seminars is mandatory.

Absence from the mandatory seminar is compensated with an assignment according to the responsible teacher's instructions.

Assessment

The course is examined through an individual seminar paper (2.5 credits graded U/G), as well as an individual home exam (5 credits graded A-F).

The course offers regular re-exams in close connection with the regular exam, as well as an additional exam regarding courses that have been completed during the past academic year (cumulative exam).

If it is necessary for a student with a permanent disability to be given an equivalent examination option compared to a student without a disability, the examiner can, after consultation with the university's department for pedagogical support, decide on an alternative form of examination for the student concerned.

The examiner, in consultation with Disability Support Services, may deviate from the regular form of examination in order to provide a permanently disabled student with a form of examination equivalent to that of a student without a disability.

Grades

Grading scale includes the grades: U=Fail, E=Sufficient, D=Satisfactory, C=Good, B=Very Good, A=Excellent

The highest grade is denoted by A and the lowest grade for a passed result by E. The grade for a non-passing result is Fail.

The grade for the entire course consists of a weighted average of all components assessed with differentiated pass grades (where A=5; B=4; C=3; D=2; and E=1). In order to receive a passing grade (at least E) for the entire course, the student must have at least a passing grade (E or, on ungraded sections, G) on all included sections, as well as having participated in all mandatory components.

At the start of the course, the students are informed about the curriculum's learning objectives and about the grading scale and its application in the course.

Entry requirements

A bachelor's degree in social sciences or humanities is required for admission to the course.

Oral and written language skills in English equivalent to English 6/B from a Swedish high school are a requirement. Equivalence is carried out in accordance with national guidelines.

A general exception to the requirement for knowledge of Swedish is allowed.

Further information

- The course is given at the Department of History, Centre for East and South-East Asian Studies
- The course partially replaces COSM22: Asian Studies: Methodology in theory and practice
- The credits allocated for the course content that is wholly or partially shared with another course may only be credited once in the degree.
- For further information, refer to the current registration and information material.