Course content

The increased globalization and the transformation into a “knowledge economy” have created needs for an entrepreneurial society, where individuals act entrepreneurially within established businesses as well as in creating new ones. An entrepreneurial society thus creates a need for knowledge of entrepreneurship. It is essential that students have the ability to understand the conditions and processes for establishing new businesses as well as for the development and growth of established businesses.

The aim of the course is to:

- develop the students’ theoretical knowledge base and practical ability in entrepreneurship.
- provide participants with an awareness and understanding of the issues surrounding the establishment and development of new ventures.
- provide conceptual tools for, and practical guidance on, the management of these issues

The content will cover:

the nature of entrepreneurial management the entrepreneurial process of wealth creation the landscape of business opportunity resources and organisation in the entrepreneurial process investigating and evaluating business opportunities developing a mission and strategy for the new venture creating and sustaining competitive advantage in the entrepreneurial venture financing the new venture managing change in the entrepreneurial venture entrepreneurial motivation and leadership business planning for the entrepreneurial venture

Course design

Teaching will take place through lectures as well as through group seminars and guest lectures.

Assessment

Examination and assignments will be given individually and in groups.
