Language of instruction: Swedish

Some sections might be taught in English.

Main field of studies

Practical Philosophy

Depth of study relative to the degree requirements

G2F, First cycle, has at least 60 credits in first-cycle course/s as entry requirements

Learning outcomes

On completion of the course, students shall be able to

Knowledge and understanding

- provide a specialised account of methods and problems within practical philosophy,
- provide a specialised account of some classical and contemporary theories of practical philosophy,
- provide a basic account of the relationship between the ideas, theories and methods of practical philosophy, political science and economics and how they can be applied to specific societal issues,

Competence and skills

- analyse meta-ethical and normative theories within moral and social philosophy,
- independently examine philosophical problems,
- place different meta-ethical and normative theories in a wider theoretical context,
- write and orally defend a minor paper using the methods of practical philosophy,
- formulate relevant criticism of individual arguments or whole theories,

Judgement and approach

- assess normative positions and take a position on the assumptions with regard to knowledge, metaphysics and semantics on which they are based,
- make basic analyses and assessments of arguments and provide arguments for a position on important societal issues by combining the perspectives of practical philosophy, political science and economics,
- analytically argue for and take a position on important societal issues including issues of gender, resource allocation, cultural diversity and human rights,
- reflect on the role of knowledge in society and the responsibility of the individual for how it is used.

Course content

The course gives students a deeper understanding of the central areas of practical philosophy: normative ethics, meta-ethics and political philosophy. Throughout the course aims to clarify the fundamental role of norms and values within these and other areas, both on an individual and societal level. The focus is on enabling students to increase their understanding of what is distinctive about this type of issues. The course also contains a large interdisciplinary subcourse, in which students develop their ability, orally and in writing, to analyze and assess arguments, and argue themselves for a position on important social issues, by combining perspectives from practical philosophy, political science and economics.

The course consists of the following modules:

1. Advanced Ethics 7.5 credits
2. Classical Works in Ethics 6 credits
3. Contemporary Political Philosophy 6 credits
4. Interdisciplinary Application 10.5 credits

Course design

The teaching consists of lectures, group exercises and compulsory seminars (one seminar in module 3 and four seminars in module 4).

A student who is unable to participate in a seminar must write a make-up assignment.

Assessment

Module 1 is assessed on the basis of an invigilated exam.

Module 2 is assessed on the basis of an invigilated exam.

Module 3 is assessed on the basis of a written assignment and an obligatory seminar.

The grade depends mostly on the written assignment, but a good seminar performance can give the student the higher grade in case the student is already close to that grade.

Module 4 is assessed on the basis of two written assignments and obligatory seminars. The grade depends mostly on the written assignments, but a good seminar performance can give the student the higher grade in case the student is already close to that grade.

The examiner, in consultation with Disability Support Services, may deviate from the regular form of examination in order to provide a permanently disabled student with a form of examination equivalent to that of a student without a disability.

Subcourses that are part of this course can be found in an appendix at the end of this document.

Grades

Marking scale: Fail, E, D, C, B, A.

The grade on the course as a whole is calculated in accordance with the following method:

(1) Each letter grade corresponds to a number. 5 for A, 4 for B, 3 for C, 2 for B, 1 for E and 0 for U.

(2) The number grade for each module is to be multiplied with the number of credits on the module.

(3) The products are to be added up and the sum is to be divided by 30 (= the total number of credits for the course)

(4) The resulting weighted average determines the grade on the whole course.

$x=4.50-5.00$ corresponds to the grade A; $x=3.50-4.49$ corresponds to the grade B; $x=2.50-3.49$ corresponds to the grade C; $x=1.50-2.49$ corresponds to the grade D; $x=0-1.49$ corresponds to the grade E.

(5) To pass the course, students must have been awarded at least the grade of E on all modules.
