- seek, process and critically assess historical source materials and relevant research when writing a short academic paper,

Judgement and approach

- make ethical considerations in connection with historical studies and presentations,
- critically review, assess and discuss scholarly texts in the context of paper seminars.

Course content

The course consists of the following modules:

1. Thematic Specialisation, 7.5 credits
2. Academic Writing, 7.5 credits
3. Research Methods, 7.5 credits
4. Paper, 7.5 credits

The course Thematic Specialisation is linked to research carried out at the department. It provides students with specialised subject knowledge and understanding of current research and research discussions in the area for the specialisation. The module includes elements of research-based learning, in which knowledge and skills are acquired through analysis of source material or minor literature reviews.

The module Academic Writing deals with the basics of academic writing, such as literature searches, problem formulation, the structure of texts, formalities, language style, genres, adaptation to the receiver, academic integrity and research ethics. It presents the different text types used by historians, such as research articles, theses and popular science presentations, as well as communication with wider society through e.g. popularisation, textbook or exhibition texts.

Module 3 addresses key methods and their fields of use in historical research. It consists of practical work with sources of different kinds. Among the topics addressed are source criticism, view of history and manuscript reading. The students work with qualitative analysis, quantitative analysis, hermeneutic methodology, discourse analysis and analysis of history use. The module includes a digital visit to an archive and searches in library databases.

Informed by the modules Academic Writing and Research Methods, the students complete the course by writing a short academic paper. The paper is to be written individually and the topic is to be chosen in consultation with the lecturer. The paper is to be discussed at a on-line seminar.

Course design

The course is offered entirely as a distance learning course and makes use of an online learning platform. Students are required to participate under these conditions, and to have access to a computer with an Internet connection. The department will provide information about the technical requirements.

The course is based on communication in writing, but an important element is that these texts produced by the students are read, discussed and commented on by participants and with the teachers. Participation in these online seminars is mandatory. However, there are no mandatory meetings that require the participants' physical presence.

Modules 1, 2 and 3 include approximately 8 compulsory exercises per module.

In module 4, the student is to write an individual paper under supervision. The students are to present their papers, critically review the papers of other students and participate in the seminar discussion of the final compulsory on-line paper seminars.

Assessment

The assessment of module 1 is based on a take-home exam. For a grade of Pass the student must have been awarded this grade on all assignments. For a grade of Pass with Distinction the student needs to be awarded a grade of Pass as well as Pass with Distinction on the take-home exam.

The assessment of module 2 is based on 3-4 minor written assignments. For a grade of Pass the student must have been awarded this grade on all assignments. For a grade of Pass with Distinction the student needs to be awarded a grade of Pass as well as Pass with Distinction on two of the written assignments.

The assessment of module 3 is based on a take-home exam.

The assessment of module 4 is based partly on the writing and presentation of an individual paper, and partly on critical review on the papers of the fellow students. For a grade of Pass the student must have been awarded this grade on the paper and the review of the other papers. For a grade of Pass with Distinction the student needs to be awarded a grade of Pass as well as Pass with Distinction on the individual paper

The examiner, in consultation with Disability Support Services, may deviate from the regular form of examination in order to provide a permanently disabled student with a form of examination equivalent to that of a student without a disability.

Subcourses that are part of this course can be found in an appendix at the end of this document.

Grades

Marking scale: Fail, Pass, Pass with distinction.

For a grade of Pass on the whole course, the student must have been awarded this grade on all modules. For a grade of Pass with Distinction on the whole course, the student must have been awarded this grade on at least 22.5 of the credits of the course and a grade of Pass on the remaining credits.

Entry requirements

To be admitted to the course, students must have passed 15 credits from History: Level 1 (HISA19, HISA24 or the equivalent).
