- distinguish between scholarly and religious perspectives
- take a critical position on the large diversity of Islamic thinking
- apply good judgement to the assessment of different perspectives on previous research on the topic
- perceptively identify their need of further knowledge on the topic

Course content

The course enables the student to practise taking on an independent assignment that is to be reported in a minor paper. The aim of the course is to introduce and provide training in academic writing. The assignment is limited to a research overview about an Islamic thinker who has contributed significantly to the ideas of Islam. The thinker is to be chosen in consultation with the lecturer on the course. Each student chooses their own thinker and is responsible for presenting and discussing this thinker with the other students and the lecturer.

Course design

The teaching consists of seminars and supervision.

Assessment

The assessment is based on the writing a minor paper of approximately 40,000 characters including spaces, a cover sheet, table of contents and list of references, and a final defence seminar.

The examiner, in consultation with Disability Support Services, may deviate from the regular form of examination in order to provide a permanently disabled student with a form of examination equivalent to that of a student without a disability.

Subcourses that are part of this course can be found in an appendix at the end of this document.
