Course content

The first module provides students with an introduction to and exercises in the application of methods used in research in religious behavioural science, philology and the anthropology of religions. The student is also enabled to practise some of these methods in depth. The course provides students with an awareness of the importance of methods, issues of research ethics and the choice of method for a specific research assignment.

The second module enables the students to specialise in a topic or problem area within Islamology. The choice of specialisation is to be made in consultation with the course lecturer. Each student will choose their own topic or problem area, and is responsible for presenting and discussing their conclusions with their fellow students and the lecturer. By focusing on a topic or problem area of particular interest to them, students will gain specialised insight into the research field of Islamology. As the students present their topics to one other, they also gain insight into fields other than their area of specialisation.

In the third module, the student is to produce a Bachelor's degree project. The student chooses the specialisation of the project in consultation with the supervisor. The seminars mainly deal with methodological issues, drafts of papers and completed papers.

The course consists of three modules:

Method Course, 7.5 credits,
Specialisation, 7.5 credits,
Degree Project, 15 credits.

Course design

The teaching in module 1 consists of lectures and seminars.

In module 2, the studies are mainly conducted as independent literature studies. This is complemented with group and individual supervision, and seminars.

The teaching in module 3 consists of supervision and approximately 6 compulsory seminars. Supervision is normally limited to the semester when the student was first registered on the course. Exceptions can be made if there are special grounds.

Assessment

The assessment of Module 1 is based on a take-home exam of approximately 15 pages.

The assessment of module 2 is based on a written assignment of approximately 10 pages and a seminar at which the student presents and discusses his or her work.

Module 3 is examined partly through the student's defence of the degree project at a seminar and partly through the student's critical review of a fellow student's degree project. If there is no degree project to critically review at the time of assessment, the examiner can take a decision to allow the student to produce a written critical review rather than an oral one. Passed degree projects at the Faculties of Humanities and Theology can be registered in the LUP Student Papers database if the student so wishes. The student is responsible for uploading the passed degree project as a PDF file in LUP student papers.

The examiner, in consultation with Disability Support Services, may deviate from the regular form of examination in order to provide a permanently disabled student with a form of examination equivalent to that of a student without a disability.
