- relate the development of Rabbinic Judaism to the emergence of Christianity
- critically discuss what can be established about Jewish culture, values and theology in the period 70-600 on the basis of Rabbinic literature

Judgement and approach

- critically discuss Rabbinic texts as a historical source and the possibility of using them to reconstruct Jewish life in Israel and Babylonia in the period 70-600
- discuss the significance of Rabbinic texts for the development and present-day shape of Judaism

Course content

The course provides an overview of the development of Judaism after year 70 (including the Jesus-oriented Judaism recorded in the New Testament) and the emergence of Rabbinic Judaism in relation to Christianity. Focus is placed on Rabbinic Judaism and literature, and the course provides an overview of the most important Rabbinic texts, their composition, contents, distinguishing features and historical context. Special attention is paid to Rabbinic literature as a source of knowledge of Jewish culture and Jewish circumstances in Antiquity and to its importance for later Jewish tradition. In addition to secondary literature, students will read a selection of Rabbinic texts in translation.

Course design

The teaching consists of online lectures and webinars as well as a two-day seminar on campus in Lund. This seminar in Lund is a very important component of the course. Funds for travel to participate in the seminar in Lund are available for application from CTR. Within the framework of the course, the student is to write approximately eight short written assignments and a final take-home exam.

The course is mainly a distance learning course supported by a learning management system and digital tools. Students are required to participate under these conditions, and to have access to a computer with an Internet connection including a headset (microphone and headphones) and preferably a webcam. The department will provide information about the technical requirements.

Assessment

The course is assessed continuously through approximately eight short written assignments and a final written take-home exam.

The examiner, in consultation with Disability Support Services, may deviate from the regular form of examination in order to provide a permanently disabled student with a form of examination equivalent to that of a student without a disability.

Subcourses that are part of this course can be found in an appendix at the end of this document.

Grades

Marking scale: Fail, Pass, Pass with distinction.

For a grade of Pass on the course, students must have submitted all of the written assignments and have been awarded the grade of Pass on the final take-home exam.

For a grade of Pass with Distinction on the course, students must have submitted all of the eight short written assignments and have been awarded the grade of Pass with Distinction on the final take-home exam.

Entry requirements

To be admitted to the course, students must have 30 credits in theology/religious studies, humanities, social sciences or law.

Further information

1. The course is offered at the Centre for Theology and Religious Studies, Lund University.
2. The course is module 1 in Jewish Studies: Level 2 (JUDB13).
3. The course has partly overlapping content with TRVN13, so the two courses may not be included in the same degree. Unlike TRVN13, the present course does not include Hebrew in the admission requirements and the Rabbinic texts are only read in translation. On the other hand, a slightly larger selection of texts is studied. There is considerable overlap with regard to the secondary literature, but the texts directly linked to Hebrew are in the present course replaced by a greater number of primary texts in translation.
4. The credits allocated for course content that in whole or in part is commensurate with another course can only be credited once for a degree. For further details, see the current registration information and other relevant documentation.
