Course content

The first part of the course introduces the students to theories that explain present-day society and their ability to explain the place and function of religion in present-day society. The students are introduced to theories of modernity, post-modernity, secularisation, globalisation, migration and post-colonialism and practise discussing the relevance of these theories to the study of religion. The later stage of the course explores the close relation between religion and politics throughout history and in several cultural contexts. Furthermore, it deals with modern religious uses of history and political/ideological interpretations of religious texts from a historical perspective.

The course consists of the following modules:

1. Religion and Society Today, 7.5 credits
2. Religion and Politics in History, 7.5 credits

Course design

The teaching consists of lectures and seminars.

Assessment

The assessment of module 1 is based on a take-home exam.

The assessment of module 2 is based on a take-home exam.

The examiner, in consultation with Disability Support Services, may deviate from the regular form of examination in order to provide a permanently disabled student with a form of examination equivalent to that of a student without a disability.

Subcourses that are part of this course can be found in an appendix at the end of this document.

Grades

Marking scale: Fail, Pass, Pass with distinction.

For a grade Pass on the whole course, students must have been awarded this grade on both modules.
