- critically assess the contents of religio-political statements

Course content

The first part of the course introduces the students to theories that explain present-day society and their ability to explain the place and function of religion in present-day society. The students are introduced to theories of modernity, post-modernity, secularisation, globalisation, migration and post-colonialism and practise discussing the relevance of these theories to the study of religion. The later stage of the course explores the close relation between religion and politics throughout history and in several cultural contexts. Furthermore, it deals with modern religious uses of history and political/ideological interpretations of religious texts from a historical perspective.

The course consists of the following modules:

1. Religion and Society Today, 7.5 credits
2. Religion and Politics in History, 7.5 credits

Course design

The course is offered mainly as a distance learning course and makes use of an online learning platform and/or digital tools. Students are required to participate under these conditions, and to have access to a computer with an Internet connection. The department will provide information about the technical requirements. The teaching consists of online lectures and optional seminars in Lund.

Assessment

The assessment of module 1 is based on a take-home exam.

The assessment of module 2 is based on a take-home exam.

Subcourses that are part of this course can be found in an appendix at the end of this document.
