- identify their need for further knowledge and ongoing learning

Course content

The course consists of an independent project on a topic agreed with the supervisor in one of the research areas of fiction, documentary prose, cultural history or translation. The project is to be presented in a paper of 25-35 pages and is to be discussed within the group with a previously appointed critical reviewer.

Course design

The student is entitled to 20 hours of supervision, referring to the number of hours for supervision of the independent project (including reading of and feedback on drafts and the final paper). The course also includes a compulsory seminar in the form of a discussion (the student's defence of their own Bachelor's degree project, critical review of another student's project and reading and comments on other course participants' projects).

Assessment

The assessment is based partly on the student's presentation and defence of their own independently written degree project at a seminar, and partly on the student's critical review of another degree project and active participation in the discussions at the compulsory seminar.

Passed degree projects at the Faculties of Humanities and Theology can be registered in the LUP Student Papers database if the student so wishes. The student is responsible for uploading the passed degree project as a PDF file in LUP student papers.

The examiner, in consultation with Disability Support Services, may deviate from the regular form of examination in order to provide a permanently disabled student with a form of examination equivalent to that of a student without a disability.
