Learning outcomes

Upon the completion of the course, the student shall

Knowledge and understanding

- demonstrate the ability to identify and critically reflect upon issues, theories and the politics of conflict and security: causes, interrelationships and possible policy interventions;
- demonstrate the ability to understand and critically review theories of conflict, war, security, ethics, popular culture within the interdisciplinary field of globalisation studies, global studies and international relations.

Competence and skills

- formulate advanced research questions regarding the broad fields of conflict and security;
- give informative oral presentations on conflict and security broadly defined.

Judgement and approach

- write critically on conflict and security issues.

Course content

The objective of the course is to enable the student to critically examine current debates and phenomena related to conflict, security and the state in the context of global development and to provide the student with a general overview of the field. At the same time, it offers the student with a prior interest in, and experience of, related fields, an opportunity for more advanced critical analysis of these issues. A number of current key issues in conflict studies and global studies are discussed and analysed.

The course offers an overview and critical scrutiny of theories of conflict, security and the state in a historical, political, ethical, gender and societal context. The student is given the opportunity to deepen their understanding of a broad range of more specific themes within the field, namely:

- globalisation and theories of security, conflict and war
- globalisation and theories of ethics, gender, populism and popular culture
- the transformation of the state and social consequences of globalisation
- theories of conflict and security

This interdisciplinary course deals with key issues and problems of globalisation, conflict, war, security, global ethics, gender, popular culture and the state, as well as different theoretical perspectives developed to increase our understanding of (a) the continuing relevance of the state and (b) the positive and negative consequences of globalisation processes.

Course design

The course consists of lectures covering key issues in conflict studies as well as provides an overview of relevant theories and the societal context in which they have emerged. Seminars offer thematic deepening of these key issues. To a large extent the student is encouraged to analyse and present findings from the literature, the synthesis of which are presented in the seminars. The student is required to write individual course papers, which are presented and examined in a concluding seminar at the end of the course.

Unless there are valid reasons to the contrary, compulsory participation in seminars is required. A student who has been unable to participate due to circumstances such as accidents or sudden illness will be offered the opportunity to compensate for or re-take compulsory components. This also applies to students who have been absent because of duties as an elected student representative.

Assessment

Assessment is based on:

- Two written assignments submitted in connection with the seminars
- Oral presentations and active participation in seminars
- An individually written course paper in which the student chooses an issue related to one of the specific themes of the course and analyses it using one or more theoretical perspectives.

The course includes opportunities for assessment at a first examination, a re-sit close to the first examination and a second re-sit for courses that have ended during that school year. Two further re-examinations on the same course content are offered within a year of the end of the course. After this, further re-examination opportunities are offered but in accordance with the current course syllabus.

The examiner, in consultation with Pedagogical Support Services, may deviate from the regular form of examination in order to provide a permanently disabled student with a form of examination equivalent to that of a student without a disability.

The examiner, in consultation with Disability Support Services, may deviate from the regular form of examination in order to provide a permanently disabled student with a form of examination equivalent to that of a student without a disability.

Subcourses that are part of this course can be found in an appendix at the end of this document.

Grades

Marking scale: Fail, E, D, C, B, A.

The grade for a non-passing result is Fail. The student's performance is assessed with reference to the learning outcomes of the course. For the grade of E the student must show acceptable results. For the grade of D the student must show satisfactory results. For the grade of C the student must show good results. For the grade of B the student must show very good results. For the grade of A the student must show excellent results. For the grade of Fail the student must have shown unacceptable results.

The final paper counts for 10 credits of the overall grade on the course, each of the assignments 1 credit and the overall performance in class as well as participation in presentations 3 credits. The grade for the entire course consists of the average grade of all assessed assignments (A = 5, B = 4, C = 3, D = 2, E = 1) multiplied by the number of credits awarded for each. For a grade of Pass on the entire course, the student must have been awarded at least E on all assessments for which the grading scale A–E+Fail applies, and the grade of Pass on all assessments for which the grading scale Pass with Distinction Pass – Fail applies. The student must also have participated in all compulsory components.

At the start of the course students are informed about the learning outcomes stated in the syllabus and about the grading scale and how it is applied in the course.

Entry requirements

To be admitted to the course, students must have completed 150 credits including a Bachelor's degree project in Political Science, Sociology, Social Anthropology, Social Work, Sociology of Law, Gender Studies, Human Geography, Development Studies, Media and Communication Studies, or the equivalent.

Oral and written proficiency in English equivalent to English 6/B (advanced) from Swedish upper secondary school is a requirement. International qualifications will be assessed in accordance with national guidelines.
