Course content

The course builds on and develops the ability of the student to analyse cultural phenomena and social issues such as regionalisation and internationalisation, cultural heritage policies, ethics and health issues, consumer-driven innovation and cultural diversity within specific social and cultural contexts. By applying different ethnographical methods, the student acquires knowledge of the various ways of approaching, delimiting and formulating issues of cultural analysis, leading to in-depth and strategic analyses from perspectives such as materiality, narrativity, discourse, ritual and symbolism.

Course design

Teaching consists of lectures, workshops and group work.

Assessment

The assessment is based on oral presentations and a take-home exam.

Subcourses that are part of this course can be found in an appendix at the end of this document.

Grades

Marking scale: Fail, Pass.

The grades awarded are Pass or Fail.

Entry requirements

To be admitted to the course, the student must have a Bachelor's degree in the humanities or social sciences, or the equivalent.
