Course content

The course contains two sequential tutorial series of 10 credits each. The tutorial series are supervised by a selection of professors and for the assignment scientifically competent teachers. The selection of tutors can change between the semesters. The tutorial series connects to the involved researchers research areas and can thus change from semester to semester.

Course design

The course begins with a hand-in assignment to be done individually. After that the tutorial series follow in sequence. A tutorial series consists of a number of seminars in which the group of students and selected researchers (tutors) at the faculty participate. The number of seminars is decided by the course director. The teaching consists of discussing the course literature and corresponding material as well as assignments handed in by the students. All teaching activities (tutorials) are mandatory.

Assessment

Assessment and grading is based on an initial individual hand-in assignment and on the assignments that the course director gives and which are examined during the seminars. In the event of performed examination activities that do not meet the requirements for a passing grade, supplementation to a passing grade will have to be done in accordance with the instructions from the supervisor as soon as possible, but no later than during the semester following the course. No re-examinations are offered.

The examiner, in consultation with Disability Support Services, may deviate from the regular form of examination in order to provide a permanently disabled student with a form of examination equivalent to that of a student without a disability.

Subcourses that are part of this course can be found in an appendix at the end of this document.

Grades

Marking scale: Fail, Pass.

The grading scale includes Pass and Fail.

Pass = The result is of a satisfactory standard with regard to theoretical depth, practical relevance, analytical ability and independent thought.

Fail = The result does not meet the minimum requirements with regard to theoretical depth, practical relevance, analytical ability and independent thought.

Plagiarism is considered to be a very serious academic offence. The University will take disciplinary actions against any kind of attempted malpractice in examinations and assessments.
