Course content

The course consists of an independent project in the subject of Swedish and teaching methodology of clear relevance to the future profession as a teacher, and defence of the independent project and critical review of another independent project. The course aims to provide students with specialised understanding of the issues and profession-based problems of teaching methodology that are specific to the subject of Swedish, and a specialised ability to execute a research study that is to provide the author with insights into a subject tradition close to a profession and the theoretical and methodological issues that are key to the subject.

As a part of the degree project, and in consultation with the supervisor if needed, the student is to seek, identify and select relevant literature.

Course design

The course consists of the student's work on a degree project, supported by a supervisor. The gradual development of the degree project will be discussed at individual supervision sessions and at supervision seminars, and the finalised project will be discussed at a concluding public seminar. The student is expected to participate actively in all the organised supervision and seminars.

Assessment

The assessment is based on the student's presentation and defence of their degree project at a public seminar and on the student's critical review of another independent project. The independent project and the review are assessed at the seminar by a specially appointed examiner.

Subcourses that are part of this course can be found in an appendix at the end of this document.

Grades

Marking scale: Fail, Pass, Pass with distinction.

The grades awarded are Pass with Distinction, Pass and Fail. Grading criteria are to be available for the grading of the independent project and defence.

Entry requirements

To be admitted to the course, students must have passed 60 credits in Swedish, the work placements and completed educational sciences core course 8 (UVK 8) - Research Approaches and Perspectives in Educational Sciences, or the equivalent.
