MIDM68, Development Studies: Field Studies of Programme Management, 22.5 credits

Literature

Students are expected to read an overall 1250 pages for this course, which they are advised to combine as follows: half (625 pages) to be selected from the literature list below, according with students' assignment topic; and half (625 pages) to be selected by students according to their individual needs (e.g., most relevant readings to their particular organizational setting or assignment topic).

The course literature list consists of diverse readings within the fields of monitoring evaluation and Learning (MEL), organizational and institutional assessment, strategic planning, capacity development, adaptive/change management, multi stakeholders' partnerships, among others and cross-cutting issues (e.g., gender, right-based approach to development, etc.).

The literature is expected to be used as reference material for the course assignment and as support in carrying out the tasks at the host organization. Core reading for your academic reflection paper will be defined together with your mentor.

Some reading material is available online as open sources. For some other material you need to access the LU online libraries via your LUCAT or by being connected via LU VPN when using the provided links below. Though links might not be provided, most articles can be found online.
